

Hoop

Object Card

American Indian men and boys practiced their hunting skills by throwing a stick or arrow through a hoop. This could be made more difficult by rolling the hoop on the ground, throwing it in the air, and making smaller targets by weaving designs with rawhide inside the hoop. For the Plains Indians this game also symbolized their connection with the buffalo and their hope for large herds and good hunting.

