THE COVER

This painting is Dan Jacobson's depiction of an event on his grandparents' homestead near Waterville in the late 1860's. While his grandfather, Peter Bloomquist, was away, a caravan of Indians approached the dugout home. His grandmother was working in the garden. She hustled her three sons and one daughter into the dugout and the Indians did not bother them. The daughter became the artist's mother. Jacobson, born in the Waterville area, now lives in Kansas City, Mo., and is a well-known painter of Kansas and Western subjects.
