Narrative Description
(Describe the historic and current physical appearance and condition of the property. Describe contributing and noncontributing resources, if applicable. Begin with a summary paragraph that briefly describes the general characteristics of the property, such as its location, type, style, method of construction, setting, size, and significant features. Indicate whether the property has historic integrity.)

Summary
The Cimarron City Jail is one story, 12'x16' white concrete building at the corner of Main Street and Avenue D. The front and east side of this square-shaped building has a barred window on each side. The Jail has a room and one interior holding cell. The holding cell has the original toilet and sink. There are writings or graffiti on the wall that show how long a prisoner was in the cell with a date of the arrest, offense, and how many days spent in there. There is a chimney, but the wood burning stove is no longer inside. Specific alterations are unknown, but the jail is still on the original site. This building is now vacant and used for storage only. The surrounding landscape features some elements that appear to be contemporaneous with the Jail, such as a hitching post.

Elaboration

Setting
The Cimarron City Jail is located on E Avenue D, in Cimarron, Gray County, Kansas. Located in the Great Plains of western Kansas, Cimarron lays between Garden City and Dodge City. The town was settled in 1878 along the Santa Fe Trail. Stretching approximately 1.14 square miles, Cimarron has a population of 2,184 in 2010. The City Jail is located on the south side of E Avenue D, between South Main Street and South 1st Street. Surrounded by city offices, businesses, and residential development, the City Jail is located alone on a grassy lawn.

Exterior
The Cimarron City Jail was constructed in 1929 and is a one-story concrete building that lacks any ornamentation. The building has a flat roof, measures 12' wide by 16' deep, and the exterior is made of concrete and stucco. The north façade contains a single slatted-wood door set in a large metal frame and a small window to the left of the door. The east elevation has a chimney in the middle of the elevation, and a small window on the top left side. The west elevation is a flat stucco wall with no openings or decoration. The south elevation contains a single small window. All of the windows have a set of vertical metal bars set inside the frame.

Interior
The interior walls are covered in stucco, which is mostly cracked and deteriorated. Once inside, the first room takes up about two-thirds of the building and lack any ornamentation or finishes. Pieces of the ceiling have collapsed, and the lower half of the walls are severely deteriorated. The floor is made of a solid concrete slab. Directly across from the entrance is an interior wood-paneled door with a metal lock that opens to the holding cell. The cell is in the same condition as the other room, with the walls, ceiling, and floor severely deteriorated. The east wall features the remnants of a chimney that is no longer functional, and a small toilet and sink. Currently, random items are being stored in this room and building.

Integrity
The Cimarron City Jail retains a high degree of its historic integrity as a small concrete building and the city jail. While the condition of the original materials is severely deteriorated, they are still extant. Its historical identity is conveyed through the retention of the original features, and its original location, setting, feeling, design, workmanship, and association. It is a good example of a rural city jail building.

Summary
The small concrete Cimarron City Jail is significant for its form – a small structure having a single jail cell – and historic function. The Cimarron City Jail is an excellent example of other similar small city jails in Kansas. Regarding their historic functions, most of the small jails were constructed to temporarily house prisoners until they could be transferred to the county jail. Some of the jails were noted as being places for troublesome people under the influence of alcohol to sleep off the effects for the night. In the case of the Cimarron City Jail, prisoners were kept in the holding cell until the county sheriff could be located. The prisoners would then be transferred to the county jail also located in Cimarron. The building is eligible under Criterion A for POLITICS/GOVERNMENT, as well as Criterion C for ARCHITECTURE.

Elaboration

Establishment of Gray County:
The City of Cimarron becomes one of the earliest settlements in Gray County. In 1878, Cimarron was named for its location at the head of a branch of the Santa Fe Trail known as the Cimarron Route or the Dry Route. The shorter, favored Cimarron Route headed directly southwest, crossed the panhandle of Oklahoma, then into New Mexico where it reconnected with the Mountain Route near Fort Union. A drawback of the shorter Cimarron Route was that water was less available; thus the name of the Dry Route. The other longer route (Mountain Route) continued west along the Arkansas River to Bent’s Fort in LaJunta, Colorado then south to Fort Union and eventually Santa Fe. Although the water was more available along the mountain route, it took a more extended amount of time to travel to New Mexico along this route. The first use of the Dry Route was in 1822 by William Bucknell.

In March of 1879 Gray County’s first newspaper, the New West was established in Cimarron. The newspaper was proclaimed to be “Devoted to the Development of the Great American Desert." Kansas is located within the central portion of what was the original Louisiana Purchase. Thomas Jefferson referred to the Louisiana Purchase as being the “Great American Desert.” This first newspaper could be considered an indication that the early settlement and development of Gray County involved agriculture and livestock. In 1883 A. T. Andreas in his History of the State of Kansas indicated early development in the county was partly the handling and raising of livestock, stock businesses, and farming.²

By an act of the state legislature of Kansas on March 2, 1881, several Kansas counties’ boundaries were restructured. New counties were created while others were renamed. Gray County was created by combining the whole of Foote County and the southern half of Buffalo County. The northern half of the former Buffalo County would become the southern part of Lane County. Gray County was named in honor of Alfred Gray who, at the time, was the Secretary of the Board of Agriculture.³ Cimarron, Kansas is one of seven communities located in Gray County.

In what would become a two-year long battle for the permanent home of the Gray County seat, in 1887 Cimarron won out over the neighboring town of Montezuma. This election would not be the last of the battles for the county seat.

The new boundaries designated by the Kansas legislature, for the renaming counties would eventually become troublesome for the new counties. Generally, one of the first issues to be addressed was the establishment of a new county seat. Differences of opinions arose between townsfolk whose city was believed to be the better candidate to become county seat. Thus arguments developed amongst the citizens of the county as well as the county governments regarding where to locate the county seats. Gray County was no different than other counties in the process of deciding what city to establish as the county seat.

After several years of often bloody ordeals and erroneous elections, the Gray County seat changed back and forth between Ingalls and Cimarron. Several of the ordeals would prove to be deadly in the light for whether Cimarron or Ingalls would become the new and permanent county seat. Later tussles were often referred to as the 1889 Gray County Seat War. On one occasion on January 12, 1889, a Cimarron man was killed, and several citizens from both towns were wounded. Eventually, the state militia intervened in the conflict. Following a special election in February 1893, Cimarron received the majority of votes over the Ingalls' votes to determine the county seat would be moved for the final time back to Cimarron.⁴ By the 1890s, Gray County had a population of approximately 2,400 people.

Early 20th Century History of Cimarron:

Cimarron was an active stop along the route of the Santa Fe trail in the mid-nineteenth century, with large numbers of wagon trains, and traders using the path. In the late nineteenth century Atchison, Topeka, & Santa Fe Railway Company developed a rail line along the Santa Fe Trail and creating new communities along the way, and thus Cimarron became a railroad town. At the same time, Cimarron was struggling to maintain position as the County Seat but eventually was given the permanent title.

By the early twentieth century, Cimarron was the only incorporated community in Gray County. Growth and population numbers would continue to grow through the early 1930s. "In 1910, Cimarron remained the county’s only incorporated town, with a population of 587. The town reaped the benefits of record-high crop prices during World War I. By 1918, Cimarron boasted two banks, telephone service, a hotel, four churches and a grain elevator that was haled [sic.] as the ‘most important shipping point between Dodge City and Garden City.’⁵ ...The population grew to 1,058 in 1920 – and 1,499 in 1930...”⁶

Up until the late 1920s, and prior to the Stock Market crash in October 1929, Cimarron experienced growth like no other city in Gray County. Growth in several markets, as revealed in the following 1929 Cimarron newspaper article, would positively affect the town and the railroad too. Some of the marketed items mentioned in the article were commodities, livestock, and feed which were shipped out of the community. Consumable goods and products brought into Cimarron and Gray County by the railroad consisted of coal, flour, lumber, agriculture implements, automobiles and gasoline to name just a few. Although this is representative of just the railroad, one can speculate how the types and numbers of goods marketed and consumed could positively affect the city and county.

The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway Company brought products to Gray County and Cimarron and as well shipped out products produced by businesses and farmers of the area. In 1929 it was reported on in the local Cimarron newspaper.

“Annual Business by the Santa Fe Good Here. 650 Cars of Wheat etc. Shipped Out During 1928, and 414 Cars of Good Shipped In. Despite the fact that trucks to some extent cut into the gross freight business of the Santa Fe, 1928 was an exceptionally good year in freight shipments both in and out according to R. Sherwood, local agent. Six hundred fifty cars of farm products were shipped out during the year, including the following: 413 cars wheat, 60 cars corn, 46 cars kafir, 11 cars horses, 39 cars cattle, 36 cars hogs, 10 cars alfalfa hay, 35 cars miscellaneous including poultry, beets, iron, etc. During the same time 414 cars of manufactured products were shipped in for home consumption as follows: 78 cars coal, 15 cars flour, 25 cars lumber, 47 cars implements, 7 cars salt, 28 cars autos, 30 cars cement, 133 cars gasoline, 52 cars of miscellaneous materials. The above report does not include part cars received or individual local freight, but is for full car shipments only.”

The quality of life for Cimarron’s citizens was expected to considerably increase when a natural gas pipeline supplying fuel for heat, lights, and power would arrive in Cimarron in the fall of 1929. Plans were drawn up to connect a natural gas supply pipeline between Dodge City and the natural gas fields in Hugoton, Stevens County, Kansas. Towns along the route would be able to connect to the main pipeline. A local paper, The Jacksonian and Gray County Record, reported:

“Natural Gas Soon. Plans are progressing nicely for the construction of a natural gas pipeline from the Hugoton field, thru to Dodge City. An ordinance for a gas franchise has been passed in Dodge City, and the holders of the franchise say they will be ready to turn on the gas for use in the town along the way by early next fall. Towns where franchises are under consideration besides Cimarron are Elkhart, Satanta, Rolla, Sublette, Copeland, Montezuma, Ensign, Garden City, and Dodge City.”

The digging for the placement of the natural gas main lines in Cimarron was reported by the Cimarron newspaper to have started on October 3, 1929. Ironically the Stock Market crashed just twenty-one days later.

Another interest amongst Cimarron was the popularity of the automobile, which perked people’s interests in the 1920s. Cars and trucks were becoming more readily available and affordable. Now people could travel farther and faster. The sale of automobiles in Cimarron and Gray County also provided a better way of life and income (although sometimes illegal in the case of bootlegging) for the county and the economy. Newspapers reported the numbers of automobiles bought and tagged in Cimarron - Gray County increased considerably between 1928 and early in 1929. One newspaper reported:

“756 Auto Licenses sold in the county to date. Although a month has passed, but 756 car licenses have been applied for up to Tuesday evening, divided as follows: 610 licenses for cars, 138 for trucks and 8 for dealers. This is only about a third of the licenses sold here last year, the total for 1928 being 2339.”

Similar to other boom towns across the American West, Cimarron and Gray County, were not free from crime, thievery, and outlaws.

Law Enforcement - Gray County and Jails:

Although not unexpectedly, crime would also be on the rise in Gray County, Kansas in the 1920s. The construction of larger jails able to house numerous prisoners for longer sentences was incorporated into the construction of larger buildings such as city halls and county courthouse buildings throughout the state.

When access to the large jails for housing prisoners was not immediately available, law enforcement officers would rely on smaller jails that were constructed in some instances to be temporary holding cells. In cases of public drunkenness, the small jails would often serve as a place for people to sleep off the effects. Other crimes of lesser punishment or shorter terms would also be served in the smaller city jails.

In 1934, Cimarron’s neighboring town of Montezuma in Gray County enacted ordinances regarding jailbreaks and public offenses dealing with intoxication. Below are two articles dealing with those offenses. The first article notes those guilty of intoxication or driving vehicles while intoxicated will be placed in the city jail. The second article makes it unlawful for prisoners to break jail or having someone assist with jailbreaks.

Cimarron City Jail:

In the summer of 1929, Cimarron would begin construction on its new city jail. A July 4, 1929 newspaper article reports the twelve by sixteen one-room jail was to be constructed of concrete. It would have bunks and a lavatory.\(^\text{10}\)

\(^{10}\) The Jacksonian and Gray County Record. (Cimarron, KS) 04 July 1929. p. 1.
“To Build a City Jail. Plans are being made to build a city jail, where persons arrested may be kept temporarily until brot [sic.] for trial. At present when the city marshal makes an arrest he must first find the sheriff before they can be placed in the county jail. This has proven unsatisfactory. The jail will be built of concrete being one room about 12x16 feet and with bunks, lavatory, etc. According to Mayor English the building will be built as soon as possible, either on the city lots north of the Cash & Carry grocery, or north of the swimming pool.”

After the jail was completed in July the first two prisoners were held there on Sunday, July 21, 1929. One individual was arrested for disturbing the peace at the Cimarron swimming pool. The second arrest was for a liquor charge.11

“Initiate New City Jail. The new city jail, recently completed, had the first occupants Sunday, July 21st, when two arrests were made. L. C. Houser was arrested at the swimming pool for disturbing the peace, and E. H. McPike was arrested on a liquor charge. Both were fined $10.00 and costs, after which they were released.”

Perhaps of boredom or to gain recognition, some of the people incarcerated in the Cimarron City Jail over the years would graffiti parts of their experiences on the walls. Two of the most legible of these writings have been photographed and are listed here:

“16, 17, 19, 21, 23, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 37, 39, 41, 43, 45, 47, 49. Bert Calwell. [date eligible] Dodge City.”

An interesting case appeared in August 1929 when three car thieves from Los Angeles, California were traveling to Youngstown, Ohio. When they arrived in Cimarron in a Chevrolet roadster stolen in Los Angeles, they would steal a tire from a local automobile dealership. Two of the thieves were kept in the Gray County jail while the third was held in the Cimarron City Jail. The individual in the Cimarron City Jail would end up with the worst end of the deal from his two other buddies.

“Car Thieves Caught Here, But Escape. Wm. Cafaro, Mike DeSantas and Dewey Lowell, on their way to Youngstown, Ohio, from Los Angeles, Calif., were arrested here by City Marshall Davis Sunday evening for stealing a tire and rim from the Crawford Bros. Motor Co. The men confessed to stealing the Chevrolet roadster they were driving, in Los Angeles. Lowell and Cafaro were put in the county jail, DeSantas in the city jail. About midnight it was discovered that the two in the county jail had escaped. They had worked the outer door to the jail, gone to the Sheriff’s office downstairs, and tying blankets together, had let themselves down on these the three stories to the ground. Free, they hunted up the third member of their gang, got $20.00 from him and disappeared. No trace of them has been found. DeSantas is being held here until officers come for him on the charge of stealing the car in Los Angeles, to which he has confessed.”13

Other Similar Kansas Jails:

The concrete Cimarron City Jail was constructed one block south of the county courthouse and just off the business district on South Main Street. In Kansas, there are several other community jails built in a similar manner and at a similar time. More information on the following jails is accessible by their accompanying Kansas Historic Resources Inventory [KHRI] links in footnotes.

Wetmore Calaboose (pictured below-left): The stone Wetmore Calaboose was constructed on the block west of Wetmore's business district. It is a square 13' by 12.5' building of 15" thick native limestone construction started in ca. 1882 with construction completing July 7, 1883. The ceiling and wooden door are covered with metal. The original earthen floor was covered with concrete after an attempted jailbreak by tunneling. The first prisoner was arrested on August 31, 1883, for disturbing the peace and quiet…by public drunkenness.14 located in the northeast corner of the jail...”

Further research has determined the jail to have existed as early as 1900.  See photo and caption below for similarities of the Hoyt and Cimarron jail buildings.

Old Jefferson Town – Winchester Jail (pictured above left): The building is wood framed. However, the original siding material is unknown for this ca. 1909 building. Currently, the small rectangular building is clad in pressed metal sheets that appear to be historic. According to an interpretive sign, this building was relocated from Winchester in 1977. “The Winchester town police were more likely to use the jail as a sleep-over for drunks then [sic] to contain a criminal. It also served as a meeting place for city council, police court and voting site.”

First Sedgwick County Jail (Relocated) (pictured above right): This small rectangular building was Sedgwick County’s first jail. It is wood frame construction in ca. 1871 with rough-cut wood boards. “…The structure contained four holding cells and no offices; it was most likely built to hold short term prisoners…” The building measures 16’ by 18’ with horizontal siding, 6” thick walls, and five window openings for ventilation. This building was relocated in 1952 to the Old Cowtown Museum – its current location.

Cimarron City Jail

Gray County, Kansas
County and State

this time, the Tobias jail is a round structure, 18’ in diameter, and 25’ tall.

Pottawatomie County Courthouse and Jail (pictured above right): The building is of native limestone construction in ca. 1910. "...The jail in Louisville had been a small 12x16 stone building unable to fill the county's needs necessitating the use of neighboring Douglas County jail at a cost of $226 per year. No mention was made to an early or temporary jail when the courthouse used temporary quarters after Westmoreland became the county seat in 1882. It is possible that the county continued to contract with Douglas County until a permanent jail could be built in Westmoreland..." The jail is an L-shape with cross-gable roof design. 20

This simple square or rectangle jail design was prominent in Kansas at the turn-of-the-century. The early twentieth-century construction used local materials that were accessible, and in some cases inescapable. The buildings had minimal or small openings as a practical measure to ensure the incapacitation of the jailed person. Most of these small jails were constructed as a measure to detain persons until the county sheriff could be located. Some of the structures have been relocated to other parts of the community after the cities no longer found them useful and were turned into museums.

Closing Points

The Cimarron City Jail is a small square concrete building that features one locked holding cell and an entry room. The building was constructed in response to a need from the community to detain persons until they could be relocated to the county courthouse. One of the most common uses of the jail seems to be holding intoxicated citizens until their inebriation wore off. The jail operated practically and functionally from its construction in 1929 and was used until 1958 as a place to detain people in Cimarron. The Cimarron City Jail is eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places for Criterion C under ARCHITECTURE as one of the last remaining examples of this type of jail with historic integrity and in its original location in Kansas. Also, the building is included for Criterion A under POLITICS/GOVERNMENT for its association with the local concerns from the community regarding the detainment of persons accused of a crime.
