Describe present and historic physical appearance.

The Kingman United States Post Office (c. 1940-1941) is located at 425 N. Main Street in Kingman, Kingman County, Kansas (pop. 3,563). The one story, truncated hipped roof, red brick building has an eastern facade orientation. A one story, one bay flat roofed wing projects from both the south and north elevations. The building measures approximately fifty-five feet from north to south and sixty-three feet from east to west. A double door pierces the center of the building's facade, surmounted by a large arched transom. Steps lead up to the doorway. Two large, multi-paned, 1/1 double hung window flank the doorway. The facade corners on the main unit are bevelled at a forty-five degree angle. One large, multi-paned 1/1, double hung window pierces the facade elevations of the wings. Similar fenestration is employed on the lesser elevations. This post office is an example of the smaller class C or D standardized design type that was repeated throughout the country during the 1930s and 1940s.

The mural, "In the Days of the Cattlemen's Picnic", was installed on the south wall of the Kingman Post Office lobby above the postmaster's door. This is the traditional location for Section artwork in the smaller class C and D post offices. "In the Days of the Cattlemen's Picnic" is an egg tempera on canvas mural depicting preparations for a rodeo that was part of the annual celebration put on by the Cattlemen's Association of Kingman. Cowboys herd cattle and horses around the corral as men and women lean against the fence and others watch the activity from horseback and a bicycle. Wilbur employs a primary palette of dusty beige, burnt seina, and green for the mural.

The mural was installed on July 1, 1942. It measured 11'2" by 5'8" 3/4" before installation and is surmounted by a cornice moulding. The mural was painted on a coarse cotton canvas that was coated with a thin gesso. The tempera medium was based on a lean-medium emulsion of egg, linseed oil and water. A coat of emulsion was applied after the painting was thoroughly dry but it was not varnished. Wilbur suggested cleaning the mural gently with a soft sponge or rag, using as little water (or water and ivory soap) as possible. In cleaning strokes she emphasized following the forms of the picture rather than using horizontal, vertical, or circular motions. If needed, the picture could be blotted dry with a clean rag. The mural was restored by Marion Iserman of Denver, Colorado in the early 1970s. In August, 1973 the condition of the mural was assessed as good and remains as such.

A varnished, wooden vestibule projects into the lobby, but does not cut off any view of the mural because of the angled outer corner of the lobby. The vestibule is a traditional design feature found in most of the post offices included in this nomination. The lobby retains its original marble wainscoting. The south wall appears to have been modernized, the bulletin boards have been covered with panelling. This panelling is used throughout the lobby on the walls above the marble wainscoting. Additionally the postmaster's door and the surround appear to have been replaced. The floor tiles do not appear to be original. The original light fixtures have been replaced with almost flush mounted fluorescent lights. Although these changes do affect the integrity of the lobby the mural itself is not affected.
The Kingman United States Post Office (c. 1940-1941) is being nominated to the National Register as part of the Kansas Post Office Artwork (1936-1942) Thematic Resources nomination at the local and state levels of significance under criteria A and C for its historical association with the Treasury Department's Section program and for the artistic significance of the mural that it contains. The mural, "In the Days of the Cattlemen's Picnic", was painted by Bozeman, Montana artist Jessie S. Wilbur (1912-?) in 1942. Because the mural is less than fifty years old, criteria consideration G, which allows for exception significance in the case of properties achieving significance within the past fifty years, is also a factor. The National Register has identified post offices containing Section artwork as being exceptionally significant if they retain integrity from their period of significance.

"In the Days of the Cattlemen's Picnic" is an egg tempera on canvas mural depicting preparations for a rodeo that was part of the annual celebration put on by the Cattlemen's Association of Kingman. Cowboys herd cattle and horses around the corral as men and women lean against the fence, and others watch the activity from horseback and a bicycle. Wilbur employs a primary palette of dusty beige, burnt sienna, and green for the mural. Wilbur does not try to illustrate a particular time so much as to capture the event in general. Of the mural Wilbur said, "An artist does not try to photograph . . . but tries first to form an interesting organization and by using significant details, suggest the spirit of the scene." "In the Days of the Cattlemen's Picnic" is representative of the regional, illustrative realism that was funded under the Section program.

The extent of community involvement in the development of the subject material and presentation of the mural is not clear in the Kingman case. Wilbur likely received the Kingman commission as a result of designs previously submitted to the Section. Wilbur received the contract for the mural on September 29, 1941 and the mural was installed on July 1, 1942. "In the Days of the Cattlemen's Picnic" was installed on the south wall of the lobby above the postmaster's door. It measured 11'2" by 5'8 3/4" before installation. A cornice moulding surmounts the mural.
Wilbur received $800 for the mural. The Kingman Post Office is an example of one of the many smaller class C or D type post offices that received Section artwork in Kansas.

Wilbur was born in Whitewater, Wisconsin. She studied art and education at the Colorado State College of Education, Greeley, receiving her Master's Degree in 1938. She then taught in art in Delaware and Iowa before moving to a position at the Montana State College, where she was employed when she received the Kingman commission.
